

Book Review:

The Man in White

by Johnny Cash

The author of this book was a music legend, world renowned for his country music, but he struggled with an addiction to amphetamines and prescription drugs. He describes himself as having been devastated, incoherent, unpredictable, self-destructive and a raging terror. However all that was behind him and with a lot of encouragement from his wife and friends he wrote this book "The Man in White".

Billy Graham said after reading the manuscript that it was one of the best writings about Paul he had ever read.

The story is well researched and informative and at the same time leaves the reader in awe of St Paul and those early Christians who gave their all and suffered indescribable persecution, because of their faithfulness and loyalty to their new found faith.

It would be difficult to read this story without being challenged to a greater commitment to our Lord Jesus.

This book can be borrowed from the Surfside library.
